INDEX.

Orators and Oratory.—Xenophon and Herodotus as dialogists, 5; Herodotus's historical oratory, 7; The 'Anabasis' of Xenophon a romance, 9; Xenophon a mere dilettante, 11; the Utilitarianism of Thucydides, 13; Thucydides contrasted with Tacitus and Sharon Turner, 15; oratory of Thucydides and the Latins, 17; modern historical composition, 19; decline of ancient oratory, 21; tactics of the ancient bar, 23; Quintilian vindicated, 25; Cicero's character examined, 27; Cicero and Demosthenes contrasted, 29; Hume's criticism examined, 31; rise of parliamentary oratory, 33; progress of debate, 35; growth of artistic oratory, —Chatham, 37; Chatham's oratory analysed, 39; parliamentary rhetoric now uninfluential, 41; William Pitt, 43; Fox, 45; Fox and Demosthenes compared, 47; Burke—a psychological study, 49; Burke—politician and orator, 51.

Bushnell on the Natural and Supernatural.—Infidelity as it now is, 55; sense of the terms, 57; God can act on the course of nature, 59; whence and how came man, 61; powers and things, 63; sin possible—sin a fact, 65; self-restoration impossible, 67; acting of the supernatural in nature, 69; Christ and his working supernatural, 71; author's doctrine of the will, 73; author's inconsistencies, 75; author's view of miracles, 77.

Wordsworth.—Hostile criticism of the 'Edinburgh Review,' 81; English poets from the Elizabethan age, 83; Wordsworth's theory as to the essence of poetry, 85; diction and themes appropriate to poetry, 87; contrast with other poets on trivial themes, 89; 'poems of the imagination,' 91; combinations of the trivial and the grand, 93; poem of 'The Waggoner,' 95; slow action of Wordsworth's genius, 97; rapid sequence of Byron's descriptions, 99; the higher qualities of Wordsworth's poetry, 101; its power to kindle associations, 103; practical test of poetry, 105; thought in Wordsworth's poetry, 107; natural arrangement of his diction, 109; simple grandeur of his sonnets, 111; Wordsworth as the poet of nature, 113; Milton, Thomson, Cowper, Burns, Rogers, Scott, 115; Byron compared with Wordsworth, 117.

Grattan's Civilized America.—Literature in the United States, 119; aristocracy in America—manners, 121; women—education, 123; young ladies—a Yankee honeymoon, 125; political parties, 127; individuals nothing—masses everything, 129; slavery—religion, 131; exacting temper of Americans, 133.

The Christian Mediation.—Point of departure between Unitarians and Trinitarians, 135; Unitarianism—its good—its humanity, 137; relations between human government and the divine, 139–141; issues of Unitarian speculation, 143.

Ethnological Varieties.—Early history, 145; unity of origin, 147; primary divisions, 149; social condition, 151; dietetics, 153; marriage relations, 155; inheritance—funeral rites, 157; belief in a future state, 159; Paganism, and Shamanism, 161; forms of religion, 163; human sacrifices, 165; intellectual unity, 167; question of acclimatization, 169; mixed races, 171.

John Stuart Mill—Liberty and Society.—Whether Englishmen enjoy civil freedom, 175; Mr. Mill's notions of Christian ethics, 177; Mr. Mill's theory of social freedom chimerical, 179; example, 181; necessary results of of differences based in conscience, 183; solution of the difficulty, 185; opposing parties do not meet on equal terms, 187; Mr. Mill's conditions of rational conviction impossible, 189; Mr. Mill's concessions touching the truth militant, 191; alleged effects of civilization, 193.

Old English Songs and Ballads.—The heroic or muscular element, 197; the press of the Seven Dials, 199; Mr. Chappell's researches, 201; the fall of the minstrels, 203; the lay of one of the last minstrels, 205; penal decrees against ballads, 207; universality of music under Elizabeth, 209; French tendencies of the Restoration, 211; song-literature under Queen Anne, 213; the age of the ballad opera, 215; generic groups of songs, 217; contested sources of national airs, 219; is there an English national music? 221.

The Germanic Confederation.—Reciprocity of national interests, 225; internal organisms give rise to international, 227; a European league, 229; inverted process of German statecraft, 231; organization of the Empire self-destructive, 233; strange perversion of opportunities, 235; a bad copy of a bad original, 237; motives and objects of its framers, 239; arbitrary proceedings of the Diet, 241; despotic states cannot confederate, 243; Dutch and Swiss confederations, 245; its military efficiency, 247; lesson taught by the failure of 1848, 249; draught of a new constitution, 251; Presidentship should be rotatory, 253; notable discovery in politics, 255; the German Tantalus, 257; Prussia's mistake, 259.

Affairs, 261.

EPILOGUE.

262—284.

LITERATURE.

Kingsley's Miscellanies, 263.
Trollope's West Indies and the Spanish Main, 263.
Cæcilia Metella, 263.
Schiller's Life and Works, 263.
Bianchi's Incidents in the Life of an Italian, 264.
Captain Slade's Maritime States and Military Navies, 264.
Bayard Taylor's Travels in Greece and Russia, 264.
Reminiscences and Memoirs of Thomas Campbell, 264.
The Minister's Wooing, 264.
Bisset on the Strength of Nations, 265.
Thornbury's Life in Spain, 264.
Self-help, 265.
Whewell's Plato Dialogues, 265.
Australian Facts and Prospects, 265.
Domestic Architecture in England, 265.
Trollope's Tuscany, 266.
Tour in Ireland, 266.
Collins' Queen of Hearts, 266.
Froebel's Seven Years' Travel in Central America, 266,
Vandenhoff's Leaves from an Actor's Note Book, 266.
Robertson's District Duties during the Indian Revolt, 267.
Briggs' Heathen and Holy Lands, 267.
The Peerage of Poverty, 267.
Class-book of English Prose, 267.
Curtis's School and College History of England, 268.
'The Leisure Hour' and 'The Sunday at Home' for 1859, 268.
Victor Hugo's Legend of the Ages, 268.

ART.

Winter Exhibion—St. Paul's—Royal Exchange, 269.
Smith's Roman London, 270-274.
Sixteen Years of an Artist's Life, 274.
Ruskin's Elements of Perspective, 274.
Painting Popularly Explained, 274.

SCIENCE.

Progress of the Telegraph, 275-277.
The Manchester Flora, 278.
Mouat's British Soldier in India, 278.
Tomlinson on Thunderstorms, 278-279.

THEOLOGY.

Life and Martyrdom of St. Thomas Becket, 280.
Tulloch's Leaders of the Reformation, 280.
Peden the Prophet, 280.
Paley's Evidences of Christianity, with Annotations by Whately, 280.
Buchanan's Ecclesiastes, 281.
Leitch's Unity of the Faith, 281.
Hood's Sermons, 281.
Parker's Emmanuel, 282.
Anderson's Discourses, 282.
Thorn on Infant Baptism, 282.
Tholuck's Light from the Cross, 282.
Proper Names of the Old Testament, 282.
Storrow's India and Christian Missions, 282.
Hinton on Redemption, 283.
Pulsford's Quiet Hours, 283.
Clissold's Swedenborg, 283.

Lord Macaulay.—Characteristics of his genius, 287; his historical temperament, 289; his mastery over facts and skill in producing effects, 291; his practical judgment and method of reasoning, 293; peculiarities of his style, 295; his want of deep thought and of imagination, 297; his occasional want of sympathy, 299; the 'Lays of Rome,' 301; 'Lays of Rome'—their merits and defects, 303; characteristics of his speeches, 305; his criticism of Sir Robert Peel in 1840, 307; his Critical Essays, 309; his Biographical Essays, 311; his Historical Essays, 313; the Historical Essays—their merits and defects, 315; his History—the first part, 317; the second part, 319; its mis-statements and exaggerations, 321; the third part, 323; his treatment of this period, 325; William III. and Glencoe, 327.

McLeod's Eastern Africa.—Fabulous wonders of Eastern Africa—its real importance, 329; the voyage out—sad presentiments of the passengers, 331; importance of a harbour of refuge at the Cape—Natal, 333; elephant-hunting—slave-dealing on the coast, 335; Sofala—its metallic wealth—the Zambesi, 337; the new residence—the 'live stock,' 339; beginning of hostilities—the Consul's introduction, 341; hope deferred—in the hands of the Philistines, 342; more trials—'the sickly season'—death of Mr. Duncan, 345; the tremendous hurricane—rescued at last, 347; inexhaustible resources of Eastern Africa, 349; importance of telegraphic communication—conclusion, 351.

Christian Revivals.—Divine influence—its reality, 353; revival under Edwards, 355; revival in Ulster—its beginning, 357; extent and nature of the movement, 359; physical phenomena, 361–363; character of what has been done, 365; people of the north of Ireland, 367; how is the world to be regenerated? 369; revival in Wales—the Welsh people, 371; nature of the recent movement in Wales, 373.

Belgium and China.—French-Belgian writers, 375; Belgium from 1830, 377; supineness of the mercantile classes, 379; decline of Belgian trade, 381: progress of Russia in China, 383; the Russian frontier of 1858, 385; the commercial neutrality doctrine, 387; the campaign to come, 389; proposed Belgian station, 391; English trade with China, 393; trading stations of European powers, 395; the duty of the Belgian government, 397.

Darwin on the Origin of Species.—Our cousins, the monkeys, 399; taming of vegetables, 401; altering the shape of animals, 403; battle of organisms, 405; vegetable wars, 407; results of the strife, 409; objections to Mr. Darwin's theory, 411; domesticated animals wild again, 413; elements of success in the struggle, 415; nature in the art of selection, 417; hybridism, 419.

Lord Dundonald—Seamanship of the Past.—Nelson, Collingwood, and Dundonald, 423; Captain Gilchrist, Lord Cochrane's father, 425; worms, and copper sheathing, 427; Jack Larmour—Nelson and the 'Raisonnable,' 329; sailors and prize money—the bounty system, 431; quits the 'Africa' rejoins 'Thetis,' 433; a court-martial, 435; Sir Sidney Smith, 'El Gamo'—indiscretion of an officer, 437; Nelson and 'St. Vincent'—Cochrane and Lieutenant Parker, 439; abuses in the administration of the navy, 441; capture of golden candlesticks and Popes' bulls, 443; wonders accomplished by the 'Pallas,' 445; rare union of military and naval qualities, 447; operations on the coast of Languedoc—defence of Rosas, 449; Admiral Harvey, Lord Gambier—explosive vessels, 451; our duties in this crisis, 453.

The Divine Life in Man. By James Baldwin Brown.—Mr. Brown's style, 455; dedication to Mr. Scott, 457; estimate of Mr. Maurice, a divine of that school, 459; the Atonement, 461; Justification, 463; office of the Holy Spirit, 465.

China and Japan.—The Dutch settlement at Dexima, 467; Chinese 'Intelligence,' 469; Yeh on the Indian mutiny, 471; duplicity of the Chinese, 473; the Yang-tse-kiang, 475; vandalism of the rebels, 477; resources of the rebellion, 479; government of Japan, the spy system, 481; aristocratic quarter of Yedo, 483; Japanese religion, 485; the butterfly trick, 487; voyage of the 'Barracouta,' 489; conclusion, 491.

Italian Nationality.—The literature of the struggle, 493; Italy's new mission, 495; wrongs of Italy—course of Irish Romanists, 497; conduct of the Italians—pretensions of legitimacy, 499; political ethics—England and Italy, 501; suicidal course of the Ultramontanes, 503; Pope's temporal power—whence and wherefore? 505; the Papacy not dependent on temporal sovereignty, 507; causes of Papal declension, 509; the Pope's temporal power no necessity for independence, 511; justice and expediency of the Italian unity, 513; folly of disintegration, 515; more federation would be futile, 517; unity the only escape from chaos, 519; Napoleonic blunders, 521; hollowness of French pretexts, 523; application of the principles of nationality, 525; pacific tendencies of nationalism, 527.
AFFAIRS, 29.

EPILOGUE.

530—552.

LITERATURE.

Bowring's Philippine Islands, 530.
Undercurrents overlooked, 530.
Cobbold's Pictures of the Chinese, 530.
Rose's Diaries and Correspondence, 530.
Autobiography of Leigh Hunt, 531.
Sharpe's History of Egypt, 532.
Liberty Hall, Oxon, 532.
Miss Nightingale's Notes on Nursing, 532.
Ayde's Review of the Crimean War, 533.
Reminiscences of the late T. Assheton Smith, Esq., 533.
Cooper's Memoirs, Letters, and Speeches, 533.
Russell's Diary in India, 534.
Julian Horne, 534.
Life of Andrew Jackson, 534.
Twelve Years in China, 535.
Humboldt's Letters during 1827–1858, 535.
Count Cavour, 535.

ART.

The Exhibitions, 537.
Watts' Fresco, 537.

SCIENCE.

Fr. Rogeri Bacon Opera quædam hactenus inedita, 539.
Bastiat's Political Economy, 539.
Dawson's Archaia, 539.
McCosh's Intuitions of the Mind, 540–541.

THEOLOGY.

Life of Bishop Wilson, 542.
Stanford's Central Truths, 542.
Life of the Rev. Richard Knill, 542.
Cunningham's History of the Church of Scotland, 542.
Killen's Ancient Church, 543.
Life of Schleiermacher, 543.
Swainson's Lectures, 543.
Browne's Sermons on the Atonement, 543.
Robertson's Lectures on the Corinthians, 543.
Memorial of J. A. James, 544.
Robertson's Biography of Becket, 544.
Commentary on the Pentateuch, 544.
Caston's Independency in Bristol, 544.
The Peculium, 554.
Quakerism, Past and Present, 544.
Robinson's Church Questions, 545.
Taylor's Liturgy and the Dissenters, 545.
Kennedy's Work and Conflict, 545.
Barrett's Sketches of Sermons, 545.
Our Houseless Poor, 545.
The Missing Link, 545.
Haste to the Rescue, 545.
Landel's Discourses on the Unseen, 546.
Hanna's Church and its Living Head, 546.
The True Idea of the Church, 546.
Hoffmann's Christianity in the First Century, 546.
Stoughton on the Twenty-third Psalm, 546.
Works of J. A. James, 547.
Aspirations from the Inner Life, 547.
Dr. Hanna's Wycliffe and the Huguenots, 547.
Stier's Words of the Risen Saviour, 547.
History of the Old Covenant, 547.
Hodge's Exposition of the Second Epistle to the Corinthians, 547.
German Literature, 547–552.

Savill & Edwards, Printers, Chandos Street, Covent Garden.